RE: RIN 1903-AA22 Rescinding Regulations Related to Nondiscrimination on the Basis of Sex in Education Programs or Activities Receiving Federal Financial Assistance

Dear Mr. Taggart,

On behalf of The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights, a coalition charged by its diverse membership of more than 240 national organizations to promote and protect the civil and human rights of all persons in the United States, and the 57 undersigned organizations, we offer the following significant, adverse comments in opposition to the Department of Energy's direct final rule, "Rescinding Regulations Related to Nondiscrimination on the Basis of Sex in Education Programs or Activities Receiving Federal Financial Assistance," published in the Federal Register on May 16, 2025 and urge its immediate withdrawal. This direct final rule is inconsistent with our civil rights laws, undermines the protections they provide, and has been issued through an inappropriate process.

Our nation's civil rights laws are a promise made by Congress to the American people that they will be free from the burdens of discrimination and that their constitutional rights and human dignity will be respected. Rescinding critical protections, which ensure women and girls have opportunities to participate in educational programs, undermines that promise. The existing regulation allows schools to take proactive steps to help overcome the effects of discrimination that have resulted in the underrepresentation of women and girls in certain educational fields, such as in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (STEM) fields and technical training.

All students benefit from diverse learning environments, but despite some progress toward gender equity, women — and particularly women of color — continue to be underrepresented in certain fields of study, like STEM. Gender-conscious programs help overcome the effects of discrimination that have prevented women and girls from pursuing certain educational studies and careers. Schools can and should create policies to increase the participation of women and girls in fields where they continue to be underrepresented, including by offering programs, scholarships, and other services to expand the participation of women and girls.

While there is no administrative process that would justify the undermining of the spirit and purpose of Title IX, the use of the direct final rule process in this instance reinforces the inappropriateness of the agency's action. The direct final rule process is intended for merely technical or noncontroversial rules that are unlikely to raise objections. Failing to ensure that schools can help overcome the effects of discrimination that have long prevented women and girls from pursuing certain fields of study or careers is surely controversial.

The Department of Energy's direct final rule, "Rescinding Regulations Related to Nondiscrimination on the Basis of Sex in Education Programs or Activities Receiving Federal Financial Assistance," must be immediately withdrawn, and the agency must instead focus on robust enforcement of the underlying law and existing regulation. If you have any questions or need additional information, please contact Liz King, educational equity senior program director, at king@civilrights.org.
